A Small Business Programs Office Publication

A Message From SBPO Director, Meshelle M.V. Howard

Greetings Small Business Community,

It's the beginning of a New Year projects, contracts and task orders tend to pick-up during this time of year. Stay in the loop with WMATA by ensuring your contact information is updated/current. The Small Business Programs Office (SBPO) sends out information on outreaches, contracting opportunities, and the SBPO Newsletter consistently. WMATA has a robust capital plan and we are looking forward to our Small Business Community being a part of those projects.

We are so excited about our new Socioeconomic Programs; we welcome all small businesses to visit our site and look at the information for the certification criteria. The Minority Business Enterprise (MBE), Small Business (SBP) and Micro-Business (MBP) programs were created for the purpose of providing additional contracting opportunities for small, women, and minority-owned businesses. The contracts and purchases that will be subject to these programs are non-federal funded and not subject to federal requirements.

To better position your business for success, always remember "Certification is the Key to Participation". We look forward to your certification applications being submitted to WMATA's Small Business Programs Office.

We know that everyone's schedule is busy, and you may not be able to make all of our events. If for some reason you missed any of our outreach trainings/events, you can find them on the SBPO website or by clicking on the following link: <https://wmata.com/business/Small-Business-Programs-Office/News.cfm>.

Cap 8 Doors and Hardware Shares Experience Doing Business with WMATA

Cap 8 Doors and Hardware, founded in 2011 by Lisa Williams, focuses on providing high-quality doors and hardware products for commercial and industrial customers within divisions 8 and 10. Their products are known for their durability, functionality, and accessibility, making them a popular choice for architects, builders, and business owners. With their commitment to quality, innovation, and customer satisfaction, Cap 8 Doors and Hardware has become a trusted name in the doors and hardware industry. Cap 8 Doors and Hardware is currently in contract with WMATA on both our DC and Virginia Headquarters.

Prior to founding Cap 8 Doors and Hardware, Lisa co-founded and served as broker for Senate Realty Corporation, a full-service real estate brokerage company. She is a member of DC Builders Industry Association (DCBIA), serves on the Governance Board of the Door and Hardware Institute (DHI), and is an active participant in Food and Friends as well as a Board Member at Phelps Architecture, Construction and Engineering High School. Lisa received her MBA from Duke University and B.S. from Florida A&M University. SBPO had the pleasure of meeting with Lisa Williams to discuss her experience:

What would you tell a small business that is considering partnering with WMATA?

Be confident in what you can do and understand the scope of the work that needs to be provided. Make sure that what you're able to provide is aligned with what WMATA is looking for. And just make sure that you have all your ducks in a row. Not only in terms of capabilities, but also in terms of being able to effectively administratively handle the paperwork of the compliance work that goes along with it is going to be critical as well.

What are some of the benefits that Cap 8 Doors and Hardware has gained through their partnership with WMATA?

I think there's been a number of benefits. One is obviously it felt really good to be part of a significant job in terms of being involved with developing WMATA's headquarters. It obviously helped us out financially just in terms of bringing in additional revenue into our company so that we're able to grow. And for me, as a business owner, it's not just about growing, but also, I'm really focused on diversity. It's critical to me, especially as a black woman. It's been my intent since starting the company to ensure that it's a much more inclusive kind of business in terms of, being able to offer opportunities for other women and minorities to be involved in our specialty is important to me. So, I think that standpoint, just being able to, in general, to grow our revenue streams so we can obviously grow our company, and I can create the kind of company that I wanted the business to be able to create, which is an inclusive, well run, minority owned company.

Is there anything about your experience that exceeded your expectations?

Good question. I think in general, a lot of it working with WMATA is great. I really appreciated WMATA's commitment to diversity and inclusion on their jobs. Overall, really good experience. Payments were always on time and wasn't very challenging in terms of being able to do the work and get compensated for the work that we did.

Transit News: Important Updates for Small Businesses

Silver Line Extension racks up ridership with Dulles Station stop

Since the opening of the six new Metro stops in Loudoun and Fairfax counties, over 60,000 people have entered the new stations. The Dulles International Airport station was the most popular stop for passengers, with over a third of riders entering and exiting from that stop alone. The busiest day for entries was November 26, with 2,069 passengers entering from Dulles, while the busiest day for exits was November 23, with 2,147 passengers leaving from Dulles. WMATA opened the stops more than a week before Thanksgiving to provide easier access to and from the airport. More info here.

U.S. Department of Transportation Announces Approximately $20 Million Funding Opportunity to Help Communities Prosper Through Access to Transit

The Federal Transit Administration (FTA) under the U.S. Department of Transportation has announced a new funding opportunity worth $20 million for its Areas of Persistent Poverty (AoPP) Program. The competitive grant funding aims to improve transit in areas that are experiencing long-term economic distress, particularly in underserved and disadvantaged communities. The funding supports planning and technical studies to enhance public transportation in both urban and rural areas, including the transition to low- and no-emission vehicles and associated charging equipment. The FTA will evaluate projects based on the NOFO's criteria, with priority given to those that mitigate air, water, and ground pollution. Applications are open until March 10, 2023. Inflation Reduction Act Funding for Rural Development

The Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) was passed by Congress in August 2022 and represents the largest investment in rural electrification since the Rural Electrification Act of 1936. The act provides funding to USDA Rural Development to help eligible entities purchase renewable energy and zero-emission systems, make energy-efficiency improvements, and reduce greenhouse gas emissions. The act includes four sections that provide new loan and grant products and unprecedented incentives to expand clean energy, transform rural power production, create jobs, and spur economic growth. The act includes up to $1 billion for RUS loans for renewable energy infrastructure, up to $2.025 billion for the RBCS Rural Energy for America Program (REAP), up to $500 million in RBCS grants for infrastructure improvements to blend, store, or distribute biofuels, and up to $9.7 billion for RUS to offer loans, grants, loan modifications, and other financial assistance to support the purchase of renewable energy systems, zero-emission systems, and carbon capture systems. USDA hosted two virtual listening sessions to provide an opportunity for stakeholders and other interested parties to provide input on implementation of the USDA Rural Development IRA provisions. On October 28, 2022, USDA Rural Development's Rural Business and Cooperatives Service and Rural Utilities Service published a Notice in the Federal Register announcing IRA listening sessions and providing an opportunity for interested parties to provide written comments and suggestions to the agency regarding implementation of Sections 22001-22005 of the Act. <https://www.regulations.gov/search?filter=RBS-22-NONE-0025> Submissions are due November 28, 2022.
