BACKGROUND –In order to serve the greatest number of customers as efficiently and effectively as possible, Metro periodically adjusts bus service to match commuting patterns, as well as changes in discretionary travel destinations and ridership demands in communities we serve.

PROPOSAL – Overall, the bus service changes in this proposal aim to increase the effectiveness of Metrobus by removing service with very few riders; eliminating trips or sections of routes where other bus service is available; and terminating select routes that do not meet performance criteria.

The savings realized from reducing the less productive service will be used to add buses on crowded routes; change schedules in response to current traffic conditions; add service to areas with the greatest demand; and restructure certain routes to simplify travel.

Routes with bus service change proposals are as shown on the accompanying chart.

Additionally, there is one tariff proposal: change the rate of fare on the 29G route of the Annandale line from express to local. Under current rates, the fare would be reduced from $4.00 to $1.75.

The proposed package of service realignments does not increase budgeted operating costs, but the changes will improve overall on-time performance and customer satisfaction, increase ridership, and improve cost recovery.

By adjusting Metrobus service to maintain a state of good operations, the proportion of passengers who will see improvements to their service greatly outnumbers passengers using the less productive service that will be reduced.

The specific proposals are as follows:
