Metro announces contract award to Hitachi Rail for 8000-series railcars

Up to $2.2 billion agreement expected to create local jobs.

Metro has selected Hitachi Rail Washington LLC ("Hitachi Rail") to build the system's 8000-series railcars in the U.S. The contract, valued up to an estimated $2.2 billion, includes a base order of 256 railcars, with options to build up to 800 in the fleet. The project is expected to create direct and indirect jobs in the region.

"We are excited about this critical investment in safe and reliable railcars and service for Metro customers, made possible through the region's dedicated funding commitment," said Board of Directors Chair Paul C. Smedberg. "the capital investments we are making in our transit system also support our businesses, our environment, and our quality of life in the national capital region."

"The 8000-series railcars are funded using new dedicated revenue streams established by the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia. In recognition of the region's commitment to Metro's long-term future, Metro structured the procurement process to encourage reinvestment of local tax dollars in the regional economy. Hitachi is exploring sites in the region with plans to add an assembly plant for the 8000-series railcars that will result in direct and indirect local jobs and return Metro's investment to the local economy.

While there are no U.S. manufacturers of passenger rail cars, Metro included aggressive goals in its request for proposal to ensure investment in local vendors.

FRA Promoting Diversity, Inclusion

The Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) is conducting a first of its kind nationwide small, minority-owned and woman-owned business disparity study whose intent is to determine whether the playing field is level for firms bidding on subcontracts from grantees receiving FRA funds. Surveys will help assess the current extent of DBE and WBE Inclusion, and if any disparities exist.

FRA Acting Administrator Amit Bose, states that “we are firmly committed to increasing equity across the American economy and ensuring that woman and minority-owned businesses have a fair shot at contracting opportunities funded by federal dollars”. “The results of the surveys will be used to assess how many small and local disadvantaged businesses we are reaching and whether we can do a better job of working with all that aspire to be FRA Contractors”.

U.S. Department of Transportation announces initial steps toward Aviation Manufacturing jobs Protection Program, Especially Small Businesses, to begin preparing for the Application Process

The U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) announced initial steps toward launching the Aviation Manufacturing jobs Protection (AMJP) program and is encouraging small businesses who may be eligible for funding under this program to begin preparing for the application process.

The AMJP program, created under the American Rescue Plan, will provide funding to eligible businesses to pay up to half of their compensation costs for certain categories of employees, for up to six months. In return, the business is required to make several commitments, including a commitment that it will not involuntarily furlough or lay off employees within that group during the same period. The maximum amount available for this program is $3 billion, one percent of which will be applied to program administration.

DOT estimates that thousands of businesses that meet the statutory criteria may be eligible to receive funding. The eligibility criteria include businesses that are actively engaged in aircraft manufacturing, maintenance, and repair. DOT is also taking steps to help ensure that small, socioeconomically disadvantaged businesses (including those in underserved communities) receive timely information about this assistance.

Greater Greater Washington News-The high-tech mobility revolution is leaving seniors behind

Elders are being left out of the new mobility revolution-and if we don't learn from the failures of the rise of e-taxis, the transportation challenges of older Americans will only compound with the rise of auto vehicles, a new study argues.

Though it might seem paradoxical at first, some of the most important ways that policymakers can support connecting seniors to new mobility is to improve their access to old mobility, like good sidewalks that pedestrian-centered road design that makes the last ten miles of their journey every bit as safe and convenient as the time they spend in the back of an AV.

To keep transit strong and make sure that seniors aren't left out of emerging modes, Nick Larco, Director of the Urbanism Next Center states that, “it would be wise for the feds to take a stronger hand in steering the next wave of the new mobility revolution, if not pump the brakes”.

Shout out to Wondem Asres!

Wondem realized a cost saving opportunity by modifying the Metrorail Faregates contract. The contract has a provision that required the contractor to store legacy fare gates. By modifying the contract and requiring the contractor to store the fare gates in WMATA's storage facility, there is an immediate and initial cost savings of $74,565.00. There will also be an opportunity for income once the old fare gates are sold on the market.
